

In this issue:

- Tip of the Month
- JDN History, Part 7
- Applications of Winches
- Examples of Application
- JDN at the China Coal

Tip of the Month

In the download area on our web site JDN product photos are at your disposal. Depending on use in 72 dpi or 300 dpi.

JDN History, Part 7

J. Diederich Neuhaus
(29.1.1925)

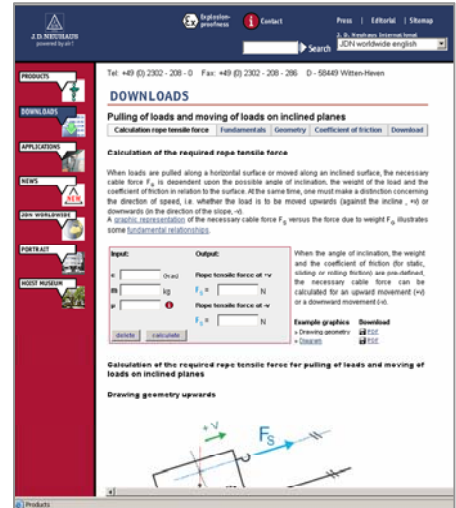

J. Diederich Neuhaus entered the company in 1952. And he had the idea to replace the manual operation of JDN hoists by an air driven motor. This was a most welcome innovation for the main customer of our hoists, the underground mining industry. These new air driven hoists enabled lifting operations to be carried out with less effort, in reduced time and more safely. In the same manner J. Diederich Neuhaus recognised that his products could also be used in a variety of other industries worldwide. In the early sixties JDN developed the first air driven hoists for general industrial applications: JDN Air Hoists of the "PROFI" series. Due to the commitment of J. Diederich Neuhaus the company grew to become one of the worldwide leading manufacturers of air driven hoists. In 1995 J. Diederich Neuhaus handed the management over to Wilfried Neuhaus-Galladé.

Special Applications of JDN Air Winches

As a further service we have placed comprehensive information on this matter on our web site. For example you can calculate required and maximum rope tensile forces when moving hatch covers or loading arms as well as when pulling and moving loads on inclined planes. Furthermore we give you a range of friction coefficients that makes the calculation easy.

Examples of Application of JDN Air Hoists – Chemical Industry

Crane system for mounting and dismounting pressure rolls consisting of two EH 20 and one UH 2. The EH can be operated sensitively and synchronously. The UH serves for maintenance processes. Smallest headroom 650 mm, span 4,5 m.

JDN at the China Coal

From 1st to 4th of November we took part at the China Coal in Beijing within a German Pavilion together with our daughter company from Singapore.

We wish you a Merry Christmas and a healthy New Year.

Your J.D. NEUHAUS Sales Team

